Money is one of the most important resources in our time. We all need money to survive. Without them, you can't eat - have a roof over your head-or enjoy what makes you happy. However, I believe that money cannot buy health, time, love, friendship, or even success. On the other hand, money can measure success. Money plays an important role in people's lives.

Everyone strives for success in various spheres of life: career success, success with the opposite sex, and so on. In the modern world, there is a concept that success is measured by money. There is an opinion that the more successful a person is, the richer they are. No wonder the proverb became famous: "If you're so smart, why are you so poor?" Therefore, most poor people claim that only having a certain amount of money brings happiness and success. However, not everyone has an idea of how much money they need for complete happiness and success. The presence of money in a wallet, in a Bank account, or in a safe is the equivalent of its solvency. The equivalent of a person-taking place. Money is a material way of identifying such intangible values as success, talent, intelligence, and so on. Money is one of the ways to control the reality that a person learns. For money, you can buy an expensive car, a huge house in an elite area for a comfortable life, open your own business, travel the world, and buy fashionable things and much more.

However, many rich and successful people are unhappy. Someone uses drugs, alcohol; someone likes a dishonest sexual lifestyle. As a rule, rich and successful people in life have many friends, but most of them are fake. As soon as a person loses their fortune for various reasons, then friends immediately disappear somewhere. There is even a saying: "In wealth there are many friends and in poverty there are not even relatives." Success is the realization of their desires and fantasies, when the man was able to discover my purpose, the meaning of life, the path, the root word which in time, and so do all the time. If you set your priorities correctly, you can achieve harmony in this world. I believe that anyone can be successful, whether they are rich or poor.
