Flag is a very important thing, even if most people think that it is not. I can suppose that flag is the face of country to which he belongs. You can ask «How is that?» and I will answer «colors». Each color has its own meaning. Moreover, when they are together they have a general meaning as a group, that can be different when they are as independent elements. I like all of their meanings, but unfortunately, it is bad to use all of them. So, I think that just two or three colors should be chosen as a symbol of a country's motto.

I think that we can use symbols or pictures of something meaningful for your country, what your country is.

For Russia personally, I would choose a bear, a balalaika and a hat with earflaps. Because, you see, foreigners always, when they hear about a country like Russia, these three things are presented in association with it. In addition, the bear symbolizes our strength; means that we can live in difficult times that we can cope with problems and not lose heart.

For Italy I could pick a pizza. It looks funny, but it's truth. I would be easier to recognize it is flag.

For France I could pick a croissant. Don't laugh, I'm so seriously, actually. It's easier to know the country, because many countries use this color strips. Agree, it is best to place on the flags of different countries those items that most characterize these countries.

However, many people who I know think that flag is not important, they don't even think of it. Moreover, children in a school where I have been studying don't even know flags of most countries. I think this is a tragedy, which is why we have a generation of indifference to everything. It shouldn't be so, I think.

In conclusion I want to say that we need to know more about flags of different countries, cause a flag make us being patriots, and just patriots can do deeds worthy of their country.
