Today as 4 years ago, we said goodbye but now the new students are going again to my favorite school, which I really miss! Even I am jealous of them but my time is over at school, now I am conquering new heights. I have some news for you!

I am writing you a letter from England, where I grind away. I don't believe in but I know that I should thank to my school and the best teachers. I study trade. This is the very interesting and difficult profession, which I have already decided at school and did not regret it. We have the same fun and productive lessons as at school but even more difficult.

Then at school I took only the first step, and did not know what it would lead to. I am excited to share that I have visited many countries: Germany, Italy, Holland, Australia, France. Yes, during this time I have time to study and travel with my university friends.

But this is not the limit, after England I want to submit my documents for student program in China, now this country is very developed in the trade. I am sad to leave England but this is a new step for the development of my career.

And last year I met my high school friends here in England. We remembered our last years at school, dear teachers. I'm excited and a little sad to remember my time at school. I have forgotten how nervous on the first day at school because of all the new things: new teachers, new friends, but it was a great time.

I want to say, thank you very much and all the teachers because the knowledge that I have received helped me win a scholarship and get a grand in the country of my dreams. You can proud of me!

I wish the new students learn well as I do.
