On a beautiful day in the summer holidays, my family and I went to visit my cousin in Paris. We went there by car. Unfortunately, it was raining when we arrived there, and I thought that my cousin and I could not now go out to play football. So we played some games on the Wii.

After a short time it stopped raining and we went out to play football. After we had played for about an hour we were so hot and wondered if we should go swimming instead.

We asked our parents and they allowed us to go swimming. So we packed our things together and headed for the swimming pool.

When we arrived there only I had to buy a ticket because my cousin had a season ticket. After we had unpacked what we needed we ran to the diving-platform. At first we jumped from the one-meter-board, then we tried two meters and after that we jumped from the three-meter-board. At last we even went for the five-meter-board, that was scary!

At lunchtime we grabbed something to eat at the restaurant. The food was delicious. We had a "Onion soup".

After we had finished eating we went to the soccer field next to the pool and played a match with some other children. After an hour we went back to the pool.

My personal highlight was that I dared to jump down from the five-meter-board. My cousin was amazed because he had not yet made it.

At five o' clock we went back again, my parents and I said goodbye and we went back home. It was a nice holiday day.
