Poetry is a very popular kind of literature. But some people think that we do not need it in our life. Nevertheless, poetry is a powerful tool for improving our spiritual world.

In my opinion, poems are a very useful and interesting literature style. To begin with, when we are reading any poem we can improve our language with great rhyme phrases used in it, which might be easily remembered.

Poetry is often a reflection of a person's innermost thoughts, feelings, and desires. This can be personal to each individual. But most importantly it can be interpreted in various ways by society and can have many different reactions. Most poetry is created to evoke a response or a feeling within someone, but not everyone will always agree on your analysis of certain subjects. It's a useful tool in influencing people because of its emotive and linguistic capture upon its audience. If you can intrigue a person and appeal to them you have a chance of persuading them to your way of thinking or swaying them into your ideas. This can be a most effective writing skill, to touch and to compel a person with mere words is a powerful instrument. Influencing a whole society would be enacting such abilities on a large scale.

On the other hand, there are those who think that poetry is an unnecessary kind of literature. They believe that it is very hard to write poems that are useful and not as good as other literary styles. Very much time is required to write a very small poem and this time, as they say, might be spent on other literary works.

I totally disagree with them. I believe that poetry should exist. It does not matter how much time might be spent on creating a poem, because the result is above all.

In conclusion, I am strongly convinced that we actually need poetry in our life. It helps us to be more emotional and improves our speech
