I and my parents arrived in Zelenograd in the winter of 1999. It was very cozy and friendly city. I want to tell a little about the history of the city. Zelenograd is one of twelve administrative districts of Moscow. It is located thirty seven northwest of the center of Moscow and the first of the three districts that were formed in territories completely outside the Moscow Ring Road. This small city the one of the main research and production centers of soviet and Russian electronics and microelectronics. It consist new and old areas. Old part of the city is located behind Kryukovo. And new part of the city is located on the territory of Kryukovo. I know all new part of the city. There is a beautiful pond, through it I went to school every day. The new and old cities are separated by a railway. The old city was built earlier so there are all the factories, institutions and entertainment such as the Zelenograd Vedogony Theater, the first Electron movie theater (which is currently closed), the ice palace and much more. Moscow Institute of Electronic Technology located here also deserves attention, which provides students with a quality education, which is valued abroad. Zelenograd is considered Moscow, but it is much cleaner, more comfortable and smaller than Moscow, it is like a small corner of Moscow, in which it is always sunny and warm.

Unfortunately now I do not live in Zelenograd, but once a month I come in here. I observe how the city grows, how new districts are being built and it makes me feel warm because I believe that one day I will return here.
