In order to excel in any field and achieve the desired results, a person needs to possess the qualities of a leader. Who is the leader? A leader is a person who leads people to a common goal. He is able to lead and control what enters into his sphere of influence. The leader is someone who can bring order to the environment. The strength of a leader lies in his ability to uphold his values, regardless of any circumstances. Devotion to one's ideas and dreams gives the leader a power that is above ordinary desires and motives. Nobody can destroy the values of the leader, because to give up their values and ideals, then for the leader - to abandon himself. What qualities does the leader possess that allows him to easily lead people, achieve his goals and establish order where there is disorder? The first and most powerful quality of a leader is the ability to be responsible! Responsibility is the path of a leader to success. It means being able to set goals and go to them, despite the obstacles that have arisen. This includes the ability to be persistent and make quick decisions. A person who does not take responsibility can not make decisions. He needs someone to decide for him. Being responsible means being a leader!

The next essential quality of the leader is the ability to communicate! The leader knows how to communicate! Communication is an instrument that everyone needs to achieve success. Without communication there will be nothing. A person who does not know how to communicate, who is not able to express his ideas and pass them on to people in a way that others understand him, can not lead people, can not inspire people. All the real leaders were able to be pleasant in communication. And one of the components of this art is the ability to appreciate the other and to tell him about it in a timely manner. After all, a passionate desire to gain recognition of one's own worth is inherent in everyone.

The next quality of the leader is the ability to organize and bring things to the end. How many have you seen of the started cases that have not been completed? How much energy, time and energy was spent on half-done things. The unfinished business, the rubble on the desktop, the unfinished letters - all this is the inability to complete the case. The path to success goes through the ability to bring things to an end, to do what they have planned, to carry out their plans, in other words - to fulfill their intentions. Another major quality of the leader is the resistance to stress. In any situation, he must remain unperturbed, cold-blooded and emotionally balanced. Other important qualities of the leader are love of people, love of one's activity, love of life, and the ability to inspire and help people. The minds of the leaders were obsessed with great ideas. The eyes of the leader should shine while walking towards the goal, and the facial features are as determined as his actions. Here they are the qualities of a man capable of leading, a man whose name will remain in history.
