In our public understanding, success is victory in something with the help of good luck. This victory can be in different situations, and everyone has different boundaries of luck, our desire. For someone to write an exam well, it will not be luck, but for someone it will.

Success finds in itself different understandings, because for everyone it is different. If a person has set himself a goal, and every day goes to it, then he achieves success. Since it is moving toward her, and does not stop. For example, a girl wanted to sing on stage, and she achieved this and considers it a success. Some people think that this is not a success for her and she can do more. Also, for example, a song can be successful with listeners.

Quite everyone has a different understanding, for example, some think that he is short-lived. Suppose you have achieved everything, and that's where he went. But still it seems to me that this is not a completely correct understanding, since it is closer to luck.

Luck is something like a surprise that we certainly did not expect. I have heard from many that they have no luck. But they really did something for this. And as it turns out, most people just wait for luck, but when it all falls apart, they are disappointed. But for success you need to gain experience for a long time. It is required to go gradually, since it is necessary, one might even say, to earn it. Nowadays, it is still different for everyone, since there are different goals and objectives.

Here, let's say, life success, for it still have not found a common concept. As it turned out for the majority, this is money, but it is only temporary. That is, to have material well-being. But there are also opinions that this is a family and a home. If a person has money, he will make people close to him. The same can be said about the other in the opposite direction, since everyone has a different understanding and dreams. I believe that a person should succeed, he must have perseverance and patience. After all, if he starts, and then realizes that it takes time and effort. Many can quit it, while others reach the end. I believe that success, in my understanding, is something like a game that we must go through. And when we pass it, we will receive that very big prize - success. And in it lies our willpower and all the achievements of life.
