It's not surprising if a person has his own hero. It can be historical personality, the character from books, celebrities and so on. For me it's my mother. First of all, my mother gave a birth to me

My mother carried me for 9 months, took care of me when I was born: changed diapers, fed, sang lullabies when she put me to sleep any time of day. I know that like many children, I was a crybaby, sometimes didn't want to sleep. Despite this my mother was always calm, gentle. She never got tired or complained. I have an indescribable feeling of gratitude for my mom.

I believe that every mother is a heroine for her children. Unfortunately not all children realize this fact. Mothers do everything for us without compensation. They don't expect praise or gratitude for their merits. Let us take care of our mothers too!

Дана: Mother makes significant contributions to the development of child's personality. All great people, including composers, painters, musicians, philosophers were influenced by their mothers. There are mothers of many children. It's a true work, difficult and sometimes not thankless to bring up 5-6 children. But I guess everyone early or late will come to his mother and will find no words to express their gratitude to mothers.

I would like to encourage everyone: don't look for heroes in books, movies. They are closer to you than it seems to be. They are always near. Mothers lend a helping hand, worry about us, cook delicious breakfast for us, regret if they shout at us. They never wait for gratitude, even if deep in the soul they would like to hear it. They are real heroes, not those who we see on TVs! We just got used that any hero has a superpower. In my opinion mother's unselfish love is real superpower. Let's appreciate it!
