

image not found or type unknown

- Misty Copeland has become the first ballet dancer to appear on the cover of architecture digest in more than three decades after she opened the doors to her Manhattan home.
- The 37-year-old, who was named the American Ballet Theater's principal dancer in 2015 -- the first Black woman to hold that role -- offered the magazine a rare glimpse inside her Upper West Side apartment as part of its forthcoming October issue.
- According to Architectural Digest's editor-in-chief, Amy Astley, it is the first time a ballerina has appeared on the magazine's cover since Rudolf Nureyev, then director of the Paris Opera Ballet, in 1985.

According to Architectural Digest's editor-in-chief, Amy Astley, it is the first time a ballerina has appeared on the magazine's cover since Rudolf Nureyev, then director of the Paris Opera Ballet, in 1985.