I really like fantasy movies. But I get very upset when the stories end quickly. Even a two-hour film with a twisted plot seems so short. And when the end of the tale comes, you realize that you have lost your favorite heroes again. And again you find yourself in a dull and gray real world. But you will not believe, I found my regular heroes. I grew up with them and soon I will grow old with them, but the film has no end to the edge. And my favorite series is called: Supernatural. This is an American television series, which began in 2005. For over ten years I have been following the development of this series. It is based on urban legends and myths. And now, for the thirteenth year, this series is going on and it seemed that there were no longer any fantastic creatures that we would not be shown or we would not know from books. But the director is constantly surprised by something else interesting. And it's the most important thing about the actors themselves, who do not change throughout the filming. These guys are so outgrown that when you see an advertisement with their participation or somewhere on the posters, you perceive them as part of your life. That here you will come home and you will see again with them and, over a cup of tea, you will discuss the fantastic life that they lead and you along with them.

The plot begins in 1983, when Sam Winchester was still a baby, and his elder brother Dean was only 4 years old, their mother, Mary Winchester, killed something supernatural. They travel with father John Winchester in search of the creature who killed Mary. Years later, Dean and Sam unite to find their father, who disappeared on the last hunt. Along the way, Sam and Dean hunt for supernatural creatures such as ghosts, vampires, spirits, demons, like their father taught.

The Winchester brothers continue to hunt the demon that killed their mother, they are helped by other hunters. Together with his father, they were able to get a weapon from which to kill the demon Azazel - Colt (modified Colt Paterson of 1836), but Dean Winchester falls into a coma and almost dies, but his father gives Colt and soul in exchange for his recovery. After the death of his father, the brothers find out that Azazel wants to open the gates of hell and release all the demons from there, but for this he needed a colt, and now he has one, but ...

Hundreds of demons broke free after the gates of hell had been open for some time and a serious threat hung over the world. And again the Winchester brothers are full of work. And time inexorably runs forward, counting out the 365 days left for Dean after the deal with the intersection demon that brought his brother back to life. And this cycle of events is endless to this day ...

You can endlessly talk about this movie. About these brothers who abandoned normal life in the name of saving the earthly world. Always on the road, through cheap hotels and fast food. Maybe someone will say that this film is stupid. And how was it possible to make a friendship between the hunter and the king of hell? Between the good man and the villain. But it is in this series that everything is not divided into black and white. That each hero has his own purpose in this world, but somewhere inside everyone has a conscience that is trying to pull into the light. And one of the cruel demons to become an ally and friend of the fighters for a safe world among the people.

This is a matter of taste, of course, but I chose this particular film. Probably because I am sure that it will not end soon. It's nice to get a TV with a cup of hot tea and delicious cookies. I wish you all a good viewing of their favorite movies.
