She is three years younger than me and lives in another country, but this does not prevent us from communicating.

We met by chance. She wrote to me in VK with some request and my first thoughts about her were: "What kind of strange girl is this?" But later we learned about each other well, she said that she used to live in Russia, but because of a strong allergy to numerous things, she was forced to move to Israel. And how much she told me about this country! About holidays customs and much more. And as it turned out, our hobbies completely coincided. We both love to draw, go through various games, write short stories and much more. Later we even gave each other nicknames coming from our names, I called her Nastensh, and she called me Nastik.

Although we began to communicate less because of enrollment in universities and other things, this does not prevent us from remaining our best friends. And I know that as soon as I graduate from a university, I will certainly visit her in Israel!
