I'm still at college but I think about my future profession all the time. I like several different areas of work but I'm the most attracted by the tourism industry. The job of my dreams is the work on a foreign cruise ship.

After I finish college I really want to try doing any kind of a job on a cruise ship whether it's an administrator, a steward, a bartender, a waiter, a tourist entertainer or a guard etc. I understand that these professions can't be considered as a lifetime career but only temporary work. It's necessary so I can understand if I like working on cruise ships or not and to get the experience I need. I would like to work for about a year and then I would study tourism management so I can come back to the ship as a manager not just a worker.

What do I like the most about this job? First of all, it will help me to travel and see different cities and countries and to know the world better. Because cruise ships travel all over the world and there are even routes to the Arctic Regions and Antarctica. Secondly, obviously it's the ability to communicate with people from all over the world. I will have to learn several languages and it's a very useful skill to have in life and I will know a lot about other nations. Thirdly, it's an opportunity to live and work in an international environment so you can make friends and connections in every corner of the world. And the last thing, it's a good salary that will help me to live securely.
