

Based on such positive characteristics as love for people, protection of the weak and sick, for me a real hero is a simple doctor. He should be attentive, serious, and noble with each patient. The main principle in the treatment of any doctor, do not harm the patient. Hippocrates said that a doctor is a philosopher; there is no great difference between wisdom and medicine. Every day, doctors struggle with various serious diseases, sometimes risking their own lives. Having extensive and deep knowledge in the field of science and practical medicine, the doctor builds an algorithm for treating each patient individually, without having the right to make mistakes. By working a large number of hours, they save lives.

The profession of a doctor has always been considered prestigious and difficult among ordinary people. They not only could treat diseases, but also had other amazing abilities. We trust these people with the most valuable thing we have - health. The doctor sees life in all its ugliness: with pain, suffering and hopelessness. But he finds the strength to be attentive and calm in any situation. After all, our lives often depend on his work. Sometimes the recovered patient comes to the doctor again to express gratitude. This is an unusual, exciting and bright feeling that any doctor can experience from their work. Very often, the doctor is the only one close person near the patient, saving and supporting him in the fight against a serious illness.

Every medical discovery is followed by a large amount of trial and error. But I must say that medicine has moved very far. Every day, new methods of diagnosing of dangerous diseases such as cancer, stroke and viral diseases are introduced through clinical trials.

Currently, all of humanity is concerned about the coronavirus pandemic. Now doctors around the world are fighting with this new virus. I have great hope that a vaccine against coronavirus will be created soon. The doctors stay our real superheroes forever !!!
