My house today in the broad sense of the word - this is a "wild and unbridled" village of the city type of Providence. The village of Providence is located in the south-eastern part of the Chukotsky Peninsula, on the coast of the Providence of the Bering Sea. Its name was received by the bay, in turn, by the named by the Captain Tomas Murom in 1848. In the village there are two or three thousand people, there is a port. Nevertheless, the whole village in length has no more than 2-3 kilometers and contains three streets that pull in parallel along the shore. From all sides of the bay surround the mountains - "Hipple", on which almost all summer lies snow. In summer, the temperature in rare days is reach up above 12-15 degrees. Very frequent fogs.

In the 80's, six thousand people live mostly military. After their departure, a large number of houses has been to the desolation and sometimes the number of houses "ghosts" causes horror. But all the shortcomings of the village overlap the nature that you need to see with your own eyes. And the beauty of which is in half an hour from the village on Serpantin, in the so-called Tundra. Glade, where "local" collect mushrooms, Shikhu, cowberry. You can find a landmark - "Eurazhka", crane, less often brown bears.

For the first time I tried "Mantak" - the caba of the whale, solid, but hearty and useful. I saw my own eyes as a kostores drag the animal figures from the brain fang. I have not seen whales, only a tail, but heard their at night. I am grateful to this "home" for haven me in his latitudes, gave shelter and food, introduced to natural sights, colorful local life, with people who rarely use the Internet because of its high cost. Here I realized how much time is released when you do not use the Internet. But if there is some question arose, then couldn't do it withiout internet.

Of course, with time to get used to the "destroyed" area, to the local population, to the local sounds of raven, seagulls, the wind and do not turn any close attention to every rustle. Adapt to weather conditions. But I still think that I'm in a way in some blockbuster, and all this is the defects of some film that will be held for a couple of years and it will take time to shoot another film, but in opposite conditions or start living real life in my new cozy house.
