Inventions simplify and improve our life. In my opinion, a strong start to innovation began in the 20th century. An incredible amount was invented for both general use and scientific things. Now we can't imagine our life without electricity, satellite communications, iron, hot water in the shower, telephone.

I believe that the greatest invention was the Internet. This difficult system not only simplified our life, it completely changed it. Changed our thinking, lifestyle, work and study.

Using the Internet we can find out any information in seconds, find out any recipe for a dish from anywhere in the world. Learn from the comfort of home. Work at a different pace. But most importantly, we can be in touch with our loved ones 24 hours a day. We can make video calls, write messages, call, and send photos. This network came over the whole world, every person. Undoubtedly, our life has changed with this invention. It became possible to read any book, check-in for a plane flight, apply to government agencies and much more.

But there is always a second side. In addition to all the benefits, with the advent of the Internet, bad things have come. For example, due to private sitting without movement, the health of many people has deteriorated. Haters appeared on the network who behave badly towards other users. In addition to the necessary and useful information, one can easily find false information. You can stumble upon the agitation of terrorists.

But in my opinion, all the bad aspects of the Internet can also be found in everyday life. You should just beware of unfamiliar sites on the Internet and unfamiliar places in real life.
