

image not found or type unknown

We took the whole life of Hamlet. Although the tragedy covers just several months, but this was the period of the transformation to the hero of the boy. A few lines of Shakespeare takes an image of how Hamlet was before any difficult issues in his life.

Hamlet was Prince of Denmark. He had unalloyed life, he studied in the best University, which was "a synonym for spiritual reformation of the sixteenth century." Hamlet was not only familiar with the scientific thought at the time, he also knew literature and art, he wrote poems, and he knew the rules of the stage action. Like a real man at that time, he knew how to fight with a sword. As the son of his father, Hamlet must avenge his family's honor. Hamlet's trouble is that he does not want to be the successor of evil - in fact, to eradicate evil; Hamlet will have to apply the same evil. It is difficult to step on this path. Hamlet thinks not just about to repay the personal injustices or just revenge for murdered father - his soul need to battle with the world's evil. He - a man of his age, which bears its duality. On the one hand, Hamlet realizes that the man - the crown of all living things, the nature of decoration; on the other - it makes sure that people not far away from the animal. Perhaps Hamlet "itself outsmarted": talks too much, thinks, does everything except the main. Man is a great, perfect creation. These beliefs of the man of his era faced with the old way of life in which all means to achieve their goals are perfect, where the laws of inhumane, cruel.

Such characters are die, physically. However, spiritually they live forever, disturbing the views of people, encourage them to seek the meaning of life. Through such as Hamlet, a man is a man, and being perfect - "homo sapiens" is in constant search for truth, solving the question of questions: «To be or not to be?»