

image not found or type unknown

The most beautiful thing that I have seen on Earth is probably life: my life, the life of animals and plants. What could be better than this, because if I had not lived, I would not have seen this colorful world. All the brilliance of nature, I would not know what it means to be able to enjoy life. This is something intangible. Life is everywhere on our planet. Life is deep in the ocean and high in the sky. The most valuable thing that every creature has is the opportunity to live. You need to try very hard to give birth to life, to save and support it, you need to try even more. Missing it and dying is easy. Only a mother can raise a child. Have you tried to grow a chick without an incubator? It is not easy to maintain a high temperature and give food every fifteen minutes. I think it's impossible. Only a mother can raise a child. A captive-bred bird does not know about the dangers that await it in nature, often it does not know how to get its own food. Can such a bird live independently? I think she can. She can exist next to a person, live in a closed cage. But is this life? Such a life does not compare with the life of birds that grew in the wild. Every living creature seeks to survive. One life begets another. The plant lives to feed the hare or rodent. The predator will eat the mouse and can survive. A dead predator will be eaten by a jackal eating corpses, and its remains will become food for new plants. This circle should never be interrupted. If at least one link disappears from the chain, all living things will be unable to survive and die. Take care of life and enjoy it every day.