

image not found or type unknown

This story happened in a faraway country called Denmark, in ancient times. The king lived with his wife and son, a Prince named Hamlet. Hamlet was a warrior in a duel defeated the king of another state. When Hamlet was sent to study in Germany, the brother of the king poisoned him and married the widow-Queen. So Hamlet's uncle became the king. Hamlet arrives in Denmark meets the Ghost of his father, who told him everything. Hamlet wants revenge on his uncle. From the approximate of the king had a daughter Ophelia, who loved Hamlet. Hamlet accidentally kills her father, with a sword puncture through the carpet. Hamlet thought he was killing the king. Ophelia has gone mad, then drowned, buried her.

Brother Laertes Ophelia meets with Hamlet in a duel. He fought with a poisoned sword. Hamlet killed Laertes. Then Hamlet gave the poisoned drink, he drank it. His mother, the Queen drank also. All were poisoned. The king died too. And to rule Denmark was the son of the king of another country, which in a fair fight won once Hamlet.