Unfortunately, today celebrities are role models for modern youth. For many, celebrities are not just an example, but perhaps even an idol. I want to immediately note that the situation is quite deplorable, but this does not mean that it has reached everyone. People tend to notice what they want to notice, and if they see that there is one madness going on around, then so it will be. I do not urge everyone to ignore public problems overnight, but it is worth considering that not everything is as bad as it may seem at first glance. There are a lot of decent people among the pile of dirt, the main thing is not to forget about it.

I want to talk about modern celebrities and what they are. We all know bloggers, there are a lot of them, they have a large audience, they sing, dance, cook, shoot funny videos, open cafes, restaurants and salons, they do anything so that they have a lot of subscribers who follow their lives and want to spend their money on them. I discussed this issue with my older sister and this is what she told me. She has a friend, a 32-year-old girl, who is already an accomplished adult. I mean, she has her own place, higher education, and a high-paying job. With all this, she is a fan of 'instagram' and she has her own idols. And then one day she complained to my sister that once again on the advice of a celebrity ordered an expensive thing over the Internet. The item turned out to be of very poor quality, the girl was disappointed and what do you think she did? She unsubscribed from it. Arguing that before he did not advise garbage, and now what has become of him? I'm disappointed and unsubscribe. What I want to say is that young people not only do not want to, they refuse to think with their own heads, they live on social networks, they are equal and think based on the information they read or heard there, they make mistakes and do not see how they slowly degrade. This is especially true for teenagers, we should be afraid for them, it is difficult to control their social activity, but they have a personality at this time, and who is their example? This is an important question and I think we should ask it to everyone so that people start to think about who they are taking an example from.
