Julia is a born actress with a lot of talent. Michael is a madly handsome man. Their relationship was very diverse. When Julia and Michael fell in love with each other, their relationship was «bright», «warm» and real. Michael was impressed by the acting skills of Julia. He even cried when he watched Julia's performance at the theater. And since then he always told her that she is the best actress in the world. She did not get tired of telling him how beautiful he was and always praised his facial features. Michael introduced Julia to his parents and announced their engagement. Julia often told herself that she loved Michael. When Michael told her that he would go to America to work, Julia was very worried. She couldn't imagine her life without him. She was afraid that he would find another girl because of his appearance. She didn't want to lose him. And, at first, it seems that this is really love. But there were moments in their relationship that Julia tried not to pay attention to.

Michael was very restrained in his emotions. It manifested itself both on stage and in life. One day, Julia called Michael a dummy when she could not stand his calmness. She demanded love from him, and pitied herself for the hopelessness. Over time, she caught herself thinking that she had fallen out of love with Michael. Julia began to feel disgust for Michael when he wanted to get close to her. And deep down in her heart she began to rejoice that she had got rid of love for him. She wanted Michael to suffer from a lack of love like she did.

I think Julia was not happily married. At first, she was addicted to Michael and was afraid of losing him due to self-doubt. And then she began to gloat when Michael showed feelings for her that she no longer had. Their relationship has gone into decline.
