Life in a modern society is impossible image without a computer. People use the computer to do their daily routine faster and easier. So the computer saves time, energy. Besides, technologies are an actively developing and the number of people using a computer for work is growing.

Let's look more detail at the advantages of using a computer. First, this is a search for information. So you can study remotely using electronic textbooks and video lecture. People can find the answer to any question on the Internet in a few seconds. Second, you choose an IT profession and use your computer to work at home. You can quickly send documents to your partner and receive newsletters and use them for financial management. Third, banks provide the services for their clients. In this way, customers can use their accounts, pay their bills and make a purchase. Purchases are cheaper when ordering through an online store and you can view the comments. You can also sell products yourself and find the service you need. Next, entertainment and communication are the advantages of using a computer. This is especially true if you are unable to leave the house, because of illness or virus pandemic. You can read any books, watch movies, play computer games with people all over the world and communicate with them. On the Internet you can find a pen pal from another country and practice the foreign language or just people with the same interests. You can even find love. For example, my older brother met his future wife online.

It is generally agreed today that the computer has a very big influence on people and his lifestyle. Computers are used in many areas in our life.