

image not found or type unknown

One of my favourite films is The Fifth Element. It`s an exciting science fiction action movie. It was made in 1997 and directed by Luc Besson - a famous film director and writer. The Fifth Element won in categories at the César Awards, the British Academy Film Awards, the Lumières Awards and the Cannes Film Festival. The Fifth Element was a real financial success, earning more than $263 million!

Some of my favourite actors are starring in The Fifth Element - Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman and Milla Jovovich. The film deals with some social problems such as violence and greed, but the film is very laughable at the same time. Strange-looking creatures are trying to occupy the spaceship where some magical and powerful artifacts are carried. One of the main storylines is where Korben Dallas (Willis) and a young woman named Leeloo (Jovovich) are trying to redeem these mystical stones as well as to save the planet and all the mankind.

I enjoy watching this captivating film because it`s never boring. The story is full of surprises and humour. And the action never stops. There are bright dialogues, battles with some ugly creatures and really exciting fight scenes with the main characters. I like those the best. Furthermore, lots of picturesque sights of the planet Earth and different ancient creatures are amazing and they look so plausibly.

I really recommend you to find the film and spend a nice evening whilst watching it. Even if you don`t like science fiction I strongly believe you will make a positive estimate of The Fifth Element because this film is special. The story is exciting and the scenery and acting are brilliant. And it`s not just a film for teenagers. The whole family should see it. The acting is very good and of course, there is a happy ending!