We all strive for something in their lives. I want to be somebody, to have something, somewhere to go. Purpose in life is the beacon, without which it is easy to get lost in life. It is therefore very important to correctly determine in which direction it should move. In my opinion, the goal in life can be what you want, that allows you to develop, and also benefits other people. The purpose usually indicates the final result. For example, we learn to gain the necessary knowledge and certificate. However, in the process of learning, we spend a lot of unforgettable moments, and hours, feel positive emotions, we pass the test. The learning process is important and interesting, and we develop our abilities, learn to communicate. And those who just "leaves the room", go to school, just because we can not go, avoid to participate in school life, lose a lot. It turns out that the path to the goal is as important as the goal itself! More often say that the goal differs from a dream in that it requires us to take action. But it seems to me, dreams are very helpful to us in determining what we want to achieve in life. Goals are born from dreams. In dreams you can be free, not to think about the limitations and the inability to get what you want. And when you feel that it is something that is important to you in life, it's time to turn the dream into a goal is to figure out how to achieve it, and act! Goals are big and small, noble and selfish, but they lead us through life. Say, people stop developing when he has nothing to strive for. Each new goal is a way to learn something new, learn new skills, develop their abilities and talents. However, it is important that our goals never hurt any of us - did not take up all the time and did not spoil our relations with family, and did not hurt anybody. As for me, my next big goal in life is to obtain a good profession. I think this is a very important and responsible step, because the favorite work makes man's life really interesting, and wrong turns into a heavy burden. I want my future profession was connected with communication with people. Most likely, I will study at linguist I think I have the ability to understand and help people. Of course, I have many more global goals is to buy things that I like, to go abroad, drive a car... Some of them are still being dreams, but I believe that the dream gives us inspiration to achieve our goals in life!
