There are a huge number of different professions in the world. From the simplest, such as an accountant or salesman, to the rare and unusual, such as an inventor or an astronaut. Each of them is important in its own way.

As a child, I wanted to work as a kindergarten teacher, because I loved children, playing with them, caring for them, feeding them, and so on. A little older, I changed my mind and decided that I want to be an accountant, I don't know why I wanted to. Already at a conscious age, I had to choose a profession precisely and enter this specialty. I thought for a long time and heard about the specialty "hotel business", I was interested in it and I decided for myself that I want to work in a hotel, and perhaps in the future I will open my own hotel. I thought that this profession suits me, because I have such qualities as: kindness, responsiveness, love to communicate with people, hospitality. When I told my family and friends about my choice, they supported me.

To open your own hotel or hotel, you need to study well, put a lot of effort, be patient, strive and go to your goal.

Work that belongs to a person who gives him joy and pleasure will give good results. Everyone is called to something. Work is a part of life that becomes a part of a person. It accompanies a person from high school or University to retirement and depends only on the individual, what will be this path: interesting, one that will help a person grow or suppress him and break his desire to create something. So, in my opinion, everyone should take a very responsible approach to choosing their specialty and work in the future.
