In the morning I woke up later than the alarm clock, and this was the first working day, I had to quickly pack up. I came to work, getting down to business, I turn around, the head from his office looks at me with a stern look. Then I realized that I got there, an employee comes up to me, the manager says that you are summoned, having gathered your thoughts, you will need to tell the beloved the reason. I go into his office, begins to wonder why, on the first working day, I was late for an hour. I had to invent a situation that the manager mistrustfully looked at me, listening to this story.

After I told him, he suggested writing an explanatory note that this would go to the personnel department and deduct the percentage of salary this month, but I didn't want this and decided to agree, told the manager that I was ready to stay today, doing work without a break and without lunch, but just to not deduct the salary. The manager thought, decided, said that I work today not 6 hours as usual, but 8 hours, a lunch break is required, but he also said that I'll be late again, that I will work not 6 hours, but 10 hours. I agree with him, so I won't be late.
