In this essay, I want to compare families in Russia and in the United States. And to be more precise, their traditions, habits and way of life.

In Russia, most families live in the apartment in multi-storey buildings, as for families from the states, they live in private houses that consist of two or three floors. Plus own homes that there is a private courtyard where you can walk children and barbecue facilities. An interesting fact is that in the homes of people from the United States, the household goes home in shoes, while in Russia we go in slippers or barefoot. In the states, most often every resident of the house has its own room, i think this is an incredible plus. In Russia, children can live in the same room. Family dinners both in Russia and in the United States are often held every day, after a working or school day. In the United States, families are accustomed to planning their day , and there is often a separate piece of paper on the refrigerator or in some corner. While in Russia everyone tries to keep all the information in their head. An interesting fact is that receiving gifts for the new year in US families takes place in the morning, and not as in Russia after 12.
